County planning service called premature

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

There is little support among Haliburton County municipalities for a county planning service.

The county's new planner, Mark Stagg, has sent letters to each of the councils asking if there is any interest in having the county provide a planning service.

Last Wednesday, Stanhope council joined Minden in turning down the offer.

Stanhope Reeve Harry Davis said some of the other Reeves he's talked to are concerned about the "extreme" costs involved in establishing the planning service.

"The county budget in 1991 is going to be scary to say the least," said Davis. Programs like waste management and gypsy moth control are already sending the county's budget increase towards double digits, he said.

Adding a planner to the county staff to provide planning advice for municipalities would cost an additional $40,000 a year, said Davis. "A majority of Reeves feel we're getting good service from our consultants and we're not paying unsightly costs."

Stagg attended the most recent meeting of Minden council to explain the planning service he's proposed.

Because every other county in the province offers a planning service to municipalities, Stagg said he felt it is his duty to bring the idea to the attention of the county and the individual townships.

He said it's up to the townships to decide whether or not a county planner service is warranted at this time.

If there is enough demand for the service, Stagg has proposed that a professional planner be added to the county's planning department, which currently consists of Stagg and a secretary.

The additional planner would provide advice on minor official plan and zoning by-law amendments and other planning proposals. In order to finance the service, Stagg has suggested that a fee for service be charged to municipalities using the service. Because the service would not be profit motivated and there would be no costs involved in travelling time, Stagg said the service would cost townships less than they are currently paying to consultants.

He's estimated that the savings could be in the range of 30 per cent.

If the service is accepted, Stagg said the county would not handle major planning issues such as preparing or updating official plans or zoning by-laws but would stick with more day-to-day matters.

Major planning needs would still be met by planning consultants, said Stagg.

Stagg told Minden council that providing the planning service is not pivotal to the operation of the county planning department and is not an attempt to have another planner added to his staff.

Minden's Deputy-Reeve Bern Berry said he feels the idea is premature at this time, because of the uncertainty of county reform and the possibility of restructuring.

After some discussion, Minden council decided to hold off on a decision until some of the other townships have responded to the idea.

Stanhope council showed no hesitation in objecting to the service.

Davis said the topic will probably be discussed at this Wednesday's meeting of county council and he feels there might be a few objections from council members.

"There are accusations of building empires," said Davis. "Haliburton County isn't Simcoe County."

Ambulance crews can strike next week

Employees are in a legal strike position Sunday, no further talks planned

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

Ambulance crews in Haliburton County will be in a legal strike position on Nov. 25.

The Ontario Ministry of Labour has issued its report following the failure of the Oct. 24 conciliation meeting. Union representative Terry Krulicki says he received the ministry's report on Friday Nov. 9 and the employees can begin labour action on the 16th day after the report is received.

"The only way to avoid a labour dispute is if the employer (Anson, Hindon and Minden) makes another offer," said Krulicki. He says the union won't be initiating any further talks with the township.

Not only will employees be able to strike on Nov. 25, but the township will be in a legal position to lock out the crews.

Krulicki would not say exactly what action the employees might take or when, but he said the union will give the township advance notice to give enough time to make arrangements to provide service in the event of a strike.

The employees, who are members of the Ontario Public Service Employees Union (OPSEU), have been without a contract since they first joined the union in June, 1989.

Negotiations between the employees and the municipality broke off in August when the township's negotiators left the table after the two sides failed to reach an agreement.

Although the employees and the municipality are far apart on several issues, one of the biggest stumbling blocks is wages.

Ambulance crews currently earn $12.40/hour and are asking for $16.80/hour, an increase of 35.5 per cent, to bring their wages to parity with the wages earned by ambulance employees in other parts of Ontario.

Last Wednesday, Stanhope council toured their new municipal office building which is currently under construction. The new facility, located next to the fire hall, should be ready for occupation in the new year.

Council says no to yeild sign request

A yield sign won't be provided by Lutterworth Township near the dam at Rackety Trail.

At last Thursday's council meeting, Deputy-Reeve Jim McMahon asked if a sign should be provided at a roadway which meets Rackety Trail because he said it's difficult to determine who has the right of way.

But Roads Superintendent Kevin Hill said the township has no say in the matter, and if a sign is wanted it should be provided by the residents in the area. The road is actually "nothing more than a glorified driveway," joining several entrances, he explained.

"There are lots of joined driveways in the township," said Hill. "When it's a driveway coming into a roadway, we shouldn't have anything to do with it."

Hill said people on the driveway should know to stop before driving onto Rackety Trail. "Everyone that's on there should know it's just an access onto the township road."

In other road matters, Hill told council that a bylaw passed by council last month to reduce speed limits on certain roads in the township has received approval from the Ministry of Transportation, and signs will be ordered.

township made what he considers to be their best offer and can't afford to meet the employees demands.

Although the operation of the ambulance service is totally funded by the Ministry of Health, Moore says the township is concerned that increasing the ambulance employees' wages will set a precedent for future negotiations with other township employees.

There is also concern that eventually the province may require the township to assume some of the financial responsibility for the ambulance service, says Moore.

The union has decided to challenge the municipality's status as employer of the county ambulance service by arguing that it's the Ministry of Health, not Anson, Hindon and Minden, which is in charge of the operation.

Because all funding and direction for the ambulance service comes from the province, Krulicki says the union wants to have the township declared an agent of the Crown and the crews become ministry employees.

The first meeting of the Tribunal was held last Tuesday and the hearing continues this Thursday. Krulicki says, depending on the number of witnesses who testify, the Tribunal could require three or four meetings to complete.

OPSEU has taken two similar challenges to Labour Tribunals and won in both cases, successfully having the ambulance staffs named employees of the province.

After the union won the second decision, in Owen Sound, the province decided not to challenge the issue and agreed that all ambulance employees represented by OPSEU in the province could become Crown employees, except for employees in Minden and Wasaga Beach.

Krulicki says he doesn't know why the province left those two municipalities out of the decision and says he doesn't think they are any different from the other ambulance services the union represents.

According to the Ministry of Health, in the event of a strike in Minden, it's the responsibility of the township to enact a contingency plan to provide service to the county by calling on neighbouring ambulance services for coverage.

Pigging out:

Porkers Pepe and Marguerita bring new meaning to the words proud parents

by Susan Grober

A Snowdon couple is pleased to announce the safe arrival of sextuplets born last Thursday morning.

The six, suckling babies made real pigs of themselves while being fed by their mother, Marguerita. But she didn't mind. After all, she's a pig, too.

Marguerita and her mate, Pepe, are Yucatan miniature pigs from Texas. This uncommon breed is originally from Mexico, but the couple currently resides with their six-month-old son Guido in the barn of Louise and Norm Weber in Gelert.

The proud mother began having contractions last Tuesday night when the temperature was 10 below, but she was blessed with a warm, sunny day when the blessed event occurred.

She started having the litter at 7 a.m., and all piglets were born by 10 a.m. An hour later her brood squealed with delight and hammed it up for the camera while being subject to their first baby pictures.

The piglets were all healthy, bright-eyed and bald, except for one robust young fellow with some bristles on his face. Louise Weber ensured their warmth with heating lamps over Marguerita's birthing pen.

"If the babies get cold, they don't take their milk," explains Weber. "They need strength to feed, and then they can get a good start on life."

In case anything went wrong with the pigs during the birth process, Weber was on hand to save their bacon.

She says sometimes accidents occur when the mother is having contractions and begins kicking. The mother could pin one of the piglets against a board and kick it.

Fortunately, the birth process went smoothly. "It's nature," says Weber. "You don't have to interfere. You just have to be there to make sure there aren't any accidents. You can't change destiny, you can only improve upon it."

Weber's cousin is a pig farmer, and her husband Norm built a farrowing crate following one of his suggestions.

The crate is narrow to prevent Marguerita from moving around too much, and to keep her piglets close during their first week. But mother and children didn't seem to mind hogging up the small space.

"If the babies stray away from the heat lamps, they get cold and numb and can't swallow their milk," says Weber.

If one did get cold, Weber would have to give it a warm bath. "Maybe I'll have to knit them little sweaters and ear muffs to keep them warm when the cold weather returns," she jokes.

The piglets eyes were open when they were born, but at that young age they rely on a sense of smell to stay close to their mother, who laid on her side calmly as they suckled furiously.

"They were so helpless when they were born, and wobbly and dopey," says Weber. "And now they look like they've been doing this for days."

The piglets, who at birth weighed about six ounces each, should grow to be as big as their brother, Guido, who is 85 pounds and about the size of a boxer (a dog, not a prize-fighter).

Guido is a popular piggy at the Weber petting zoo, which also features, horses, sheep, chickens, and a couple of spider monkeys. He's also quite ravenous, and will eat anything he can get his snout on, says Weber.

One time Weber's mother visited, carrying a birthday cake. She barely got out of the car when Guido climbed up her leg to get at the sweet treat.

His parents, however, are more polite. "You'd think any creature this size, this massive and intimidating, would have the rule of the roost," says Weber. "But when it's feeding time, they back off and let the horses and sheep eat before they do. Thank goodness for that, considering they're built like NFL linebackers packed into a body two feet tall."

Don't be a hog!

Being born is hungry work, as these one-hour old piglets can attest. Their mother, Marguerita, a Yucatan miniature pig, gave birth to a litter of six at the Weber farm last Thursday.

When examining the breeding pair, it's hard to think of them as being miniature. But Weber says six-year-old Marguerita is about a third of the size of a domestic sow. And Pepe, weighing in at about 220 pounds, is much smaller than boars she's had which weighed up to 600 pounds.

Often, people purchase the even-tempered Yucatan miniatures as pets. Actually, some of Marguerita and Pepe's last litter went to a condominium in Orillia (don't be disgusted, they can be housetrained).

Weber has a list of about 10 people who wanted at least one piglet from this recent litter, so some will be disappointed she only had six.

But Weber has more than one story which shows they'll get more than they bargain for when taking on any of these boarish creatures.

Like the time the entire pig family decided to take a stroll down the middle of County Road 1: papa pig, mama pig and baby pig, marching all in a line.

Weber was terrified, because the pigs' stone-grey colouring matches the paved highway, so she hurriedly rushed outside to shoo the pigs to safety. Later she got a phone call from a neighbour who was laughing hysterically. "I never saw anything so funny as Little Red Riding Hood and the Three Little Pigs," the neighbour joked between guffaws.

When they manage to escape these near misses, these rambunctious pigs can survive to grow as old as 22 years, says Weber.

"They have a varied lifespan, depending on what they're used for, food or fun," she says. "I imagine in Mexico they don't live very long."

Upkeep isn't too costly, because they don't eat as much as domestic pigs. The young ones eat a yogurt capful, morning and night. And, no, they don't like pork chops.

Size isn't the only differentiation between domestic pigs and the Yucatan miniature (not to be confused with the Vietnamese potbelly miniature) pig. The Yucatan is dark grey, with a thin, smooth skin like a shark instead of a hide. It also has a distinctive waddle hanging under its chin.

Unlike the domestic pig, the only bristles on the Yucatan are on its face. Yucatans don't even have tufted tails.

"With their dark skin and bald heads, they remind me of (soul singer) Isaac Hayes," Weber jokes about the piglets.

Later, she decides to name the sleepy little runt of the litter Isaac. "It takes awhile to get to know them, but once you do you can get a name for them... they each have their different personalities."

Marguerita and Pepe were named in honour of their Mexican heritage by their original owners in Lindsay. "There was a little girl over here in the summertime and she wanted to know if they spoke Spanish," says Weber.

Meanwhile, mother and children are doing fine. And, even though they can't keep their litter, the couple seems content in their Gelert barn. Then again, who wouldn't prefer breeding to being the main ingredient in a burrito?

Editorial

Recently some local municipal councillors have expressed hesitation at the idea of a county-run planning service.

There shouldn't be any hesitation. The proposal should be tabled for at least a year and probably longer.

Regardless of what ever other county in the province has, Haliburton County does not need to take on any more costly responsibilities until it has a handle on the current agenda.

The entire country has entered a recession and there is no indication that the local economy is going to be spared any of the pain.

The last thing people are going to want after a hard winter is to be hit with a series of hefty property tax increases.

With the county already facing an Official Plan, Waste Management, a new county building, and skyrocketing welfare and Children's Aid costs, there is no sense in adding to the burden with more planning staff.

Councillors have little flexibility when it comes to budget cuts, but avoiding unnecessary bureaucracy is a good place to start.

While we recognize the merit in establishing a county planning department that can meet local needs, now is not the time.

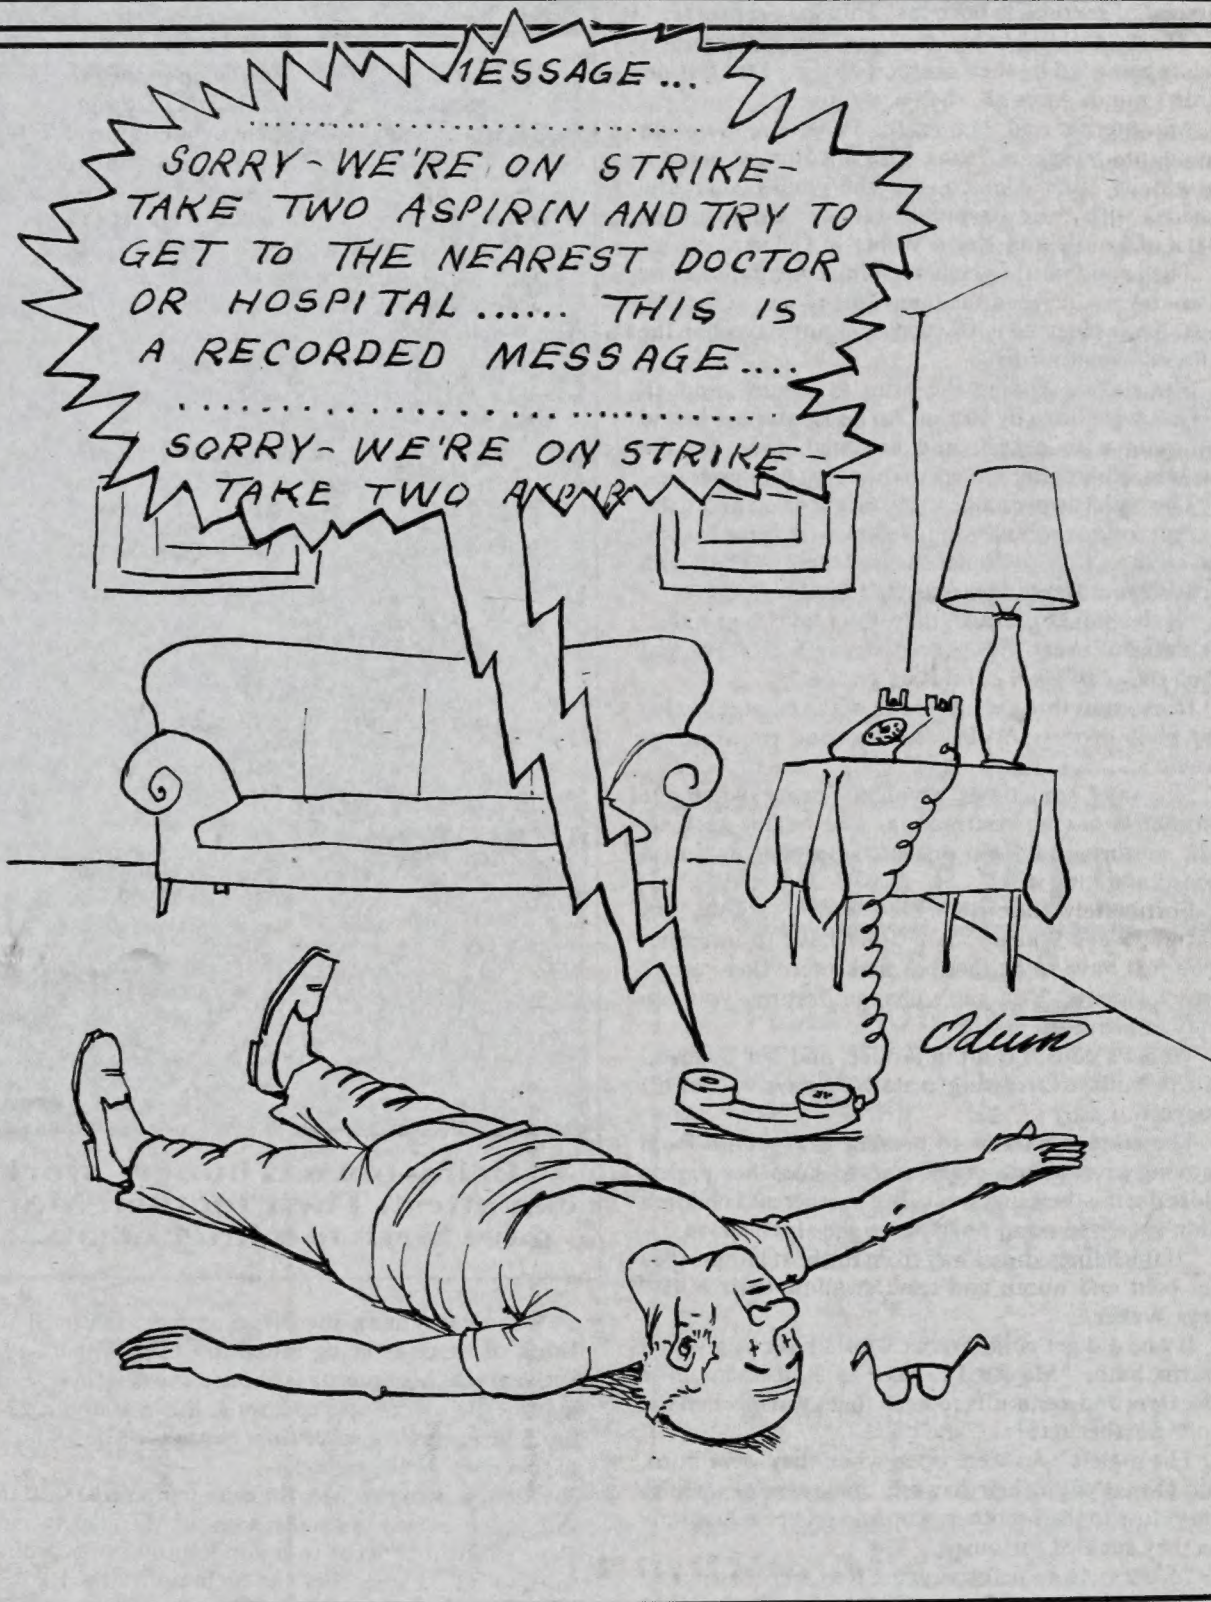

As Stanhope Reeve Harry Davis and Minden Deputy-Reeve Bern Berry have pointed out, any enlargement of the county's planning responsibilities should wait until after the County Official Plan is in place and the effects of county restructuring are known.

The services that County Planner Mark Stagg proposes to offer the municipalities are being well met by commercial consulting firms and, for the most part, are paid for by developers.

So there is no reason to add at least $40,000 to the county pay-roll for an additional planner who will have to be paid whether the municipalities use his services or not.

When the economy finally turns around and the next development boom begins, then the county would be well-advised to take another look at the proposal.

Until then, let's walk before we run.

Phone-in shows would make Bell's ears ring

Mister Watson, come here. I want you.

Those seven fateful words were uttered 114 years ago. Anyone in the vicinity of the young inventor who said them would have concluded he was nuts. After all it was 1876 — no cars, no electric lights, no radios — and here was a man in broad daylight, all by himself, talking into some newfangled jumble of wires and machinery.

He wasn't mad; he was Alexander Graham Bell. And he had just transmitted intelligible words by telephone for the first time.

A momentous moment in the history of man. Still, I wonder what Bell would make of his invention if he could walk our planet today. I wonder how he'd react to the sight of phone booths on street corners? Or the fact that people routinely ring up Memphis,

Black 'n White

by Arthur Black

Melbourne or Moscow? What would he have to say about telephone answering machines? Could he in his wildest dreams have imagined that one day an American president would talk by phone with an astronaut orbiting the moon?

Personally, I'd surrender my Bell Credit Card for the chance to see Alex's face as he listened in on a radio phone-in show.

The telephone has transformed all our lives just as surely — and perhaps as profoundly — as fire, the wheel, and Mister Edison's wee, incandescent glass bulb.

But let's face it — it hasn't been roses all the way.

The miracle of the telephone also ushered in the curse of the obscene call, wrong numbers, heart-shattering intrusions during lovemaking...

And worse, Exhibit A: the cellular car phone.

I resent government intrusion as much as the next civil libertarian, but if El Supremo Muldoon was to send in his jack-booted Van Doos tomorrow to confiscate and blast to smithereens every car phone from Come-By-Chance to the Queen Charlottes, he wouldn't hear a peep of disapproval from me. Have you had the experience yet? Driving

HAVE concert raises $900 for students in Gambia

Editor:

We wish to inform your readers that up to $900 has been raised from the HAVE Annual Variety Concert this year. Members wish to express their appreciation to The Times, to those who gave so generously, including the businesses that sponsored our ads, and to all the organizers and entertainers.

Clarence and Jean McInerney will be leaving for The Gambia near the end of this month. We wish them all the success in this Primary Education project. Any monies raised over and above the project cost of $32,000 will be put toward school supplies thereby extending this project to as many schools as possible. The need is great. I would like to point out that aside from the two concerts put on by HAVE, Clarence and Jean have raised the required amount unassisted. (HAVE was used as a means to obtain funds from CIDA). Clarence does not enjoy good health, yet his tremendous amount of energy is amazing to those around him. In this case, compassion is the key to youthfulness.

I have recently been asked by a friend if these Gambian people, so rich in their own culture, really want to be literate. First of all, I hope that we would never impose our western ways on these people, assuming that we are in any way superior. They are most likely far more advanced than we are; spiritually, mentally and culturally. However, the McInerney's slides will tell you that children in Africa consider it a great privilege to be able to go to school. (Try throwing that one at your children as they complain about getting up in the morning.) These children have every right to advance within their own culture. While their government is too poor to supply them with necessities, we can help as individuals, and through CIDA, collectively, as a nation. How's that for propaganda?

H.A.V.E. welcomes new members and volunteers to help with fund-raising, administration, and monitoring of projects. We are in need of an assistant secretary, and people with organizing abilities.

Contrary to previous publicity, the next HAVE meeting will be on November 22 at Gerry Feltham's house in Ingoldsby at 7:30 p.m. sharp. Everyone is welcome. For further information call 457-3684 or 286-1647.

Chairperson,
HAVE Committee.

Ride organizer thanks supporters of lost event

Editor:

The 1991 Ride for Sight wanted to return HOME to Minden and we had hoped that the people of Minden would feel the same way. With the construction of the arena to be completed by Spring and the possibility of the use of the adjacent property near the fairgrounds we looked forward to accepting the invitation to return to Minden.

On October 11th, 1990 the Ride for Sight representatives attended a Council meeting where six people, all representing groups, voiced the same opinion - that the Ride for Sight was wanted back. Two men speaking for themselves and their own businesses said the Ride for Sight was more trouble and expense than it was worth. Shortly afterward the Council motioned and voted. It was decided that the Ride would not be welcome and needless to say we were quite surprised and very disappointed.

The 1991 Planning Team would like to thank all those who showed us their support and to the six speakers at the Council meeting. We would also like to thank all those in Minden who in previous years welcomed the Ride and contributed to our growth to what it is today.

Assistant Chairperson,

Breanna

This miraculous four-year-old continues to defy the odds

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

In many ways Breanna Barras is like any other four-year-old girl. She's bright, inquisitive, shy around strangers, has a favourite stuffed toy and is a big fan of Fred Penner's television show.

But unlike other little girls her age, every day in Breanna's life is a miracle in itself.

Breanna has hydrocephalus, a condition which causes an excess of spinal fluid around her brain and she also suffers from cranial hemorrhages and spinal meningitis.

To clear the excess fluid that collects around her brain, doctors installed three shunts in Breanna's head to drain the fluid into her stomach.

"If you believe in miracles, she's definitely one," says Breanna's mother Judy, who has taken an extended leave of absence from the Ministry of Natural Resources Minden office to care for her daughter. "She shouldn't be alive today. The doctors don't know how long she'll live, whether it's two years, two weeks or two hours."

Despite the grim prognosis and the heavily weighed odds against her, Breanna has astounded her family and doctors with her will to live.

Some times the hemorrhaging will clog the shunts, making another operation necessary. In her four years, Breanna has undergone surgery 34 times and has had 50 or 60 major hemorrhages since she was a year-and-a-half old.

Last February Breanna had a major hemorrhage and doctors at Toronto's Sick Children's Hospital gave the tot just two hours to live when she slipped into a coma.

She was placed in palliative care and made as comfortable as possible. "There was no heroics," says Judy. "There was nothing more the doctors could do."

But Breanna hung on.

She survived the two hours, and although still in coma and without any life support, continued to draw laboured breaths every 20 seconds.

Judy was told that if Breanna ever came out of the coma she wouldn't be able to understand anything and would be blind.

A month and a half after she became comatose, Breanna opened her eyes and her condition slowly improved until she was able to reach out with her left hand. On June 4, Judy was able to bring Breanna back to their home in Peterborough, where the little girl receives therapy through the Five Counties Children's Centre.

"She sees and she understands," says Judy. "She expresses herself by pointing and with gestures and she follows simple commands." When asked, Breanna points to the television or to her nose and is able to use a walker.

As a result of all the operations she's had, many of Breanna's veins have collapsed and doctors have now fitted her with a PortaCat so they can readily hook her up to an intravenous device.

On the day after Thanksgiving, Judy had just finished giving Breanna a bath when the little girl gave a loud scream, an indication that she was having another hemorrhage.

Judy says Breanna's breathing became very shallow and her heart rate was only 30 beats per minute compared to her usual 120 beats per minute.

She was rushed to the Civic Hospital in Peterborough where her vital signs remained dangerously low for eight hours. Her doctor, Dr. Michael Boyer, monitored Breanna's condition but could do little else. "There was nothing more he could do," says Judy. "He said it was up to her."

And Breanna tapped whatever reserve of strength that has kept her going for so long to overcome the odds and recover.

She returned home with her mother on October 29 and by Halloween she was dressed up as a bumble bee helping her mother hand out candy to neighbourhood children.

"She's better now than when she went in," says Judy. "She's making more noises and is a lot brighter."

And Breanna has spoken her first words since going into the coma in February. "She said 'hi Mom'," says Judy. "She's making a lot of sounds, but they come out hoarse because she hasn't used her voice."

Some of Breanna's problems stem from Judy's troubled pregnancy. Breanna was a twin, but during the fourth month of her term Judy lost the other baby. Doctors believe Breanna suffered a small stroke at that time, which may have caused the cyst she has behind her left eye.

Breanna was just three months old when her problems became apparent. When she was first diagnosed, doctors told Judy that half of Breanna's brain was missing. It was at that time that Breanna was placed under that care of Dr. Robin Humphrey, the neurosurgeon who has treated her ever since.

Taking care of Breanna is a full-time job for Judy, who is a single mother,

(more on page 7)

Caring for child is a full-time job

and she admits that it sometimes gets her down.

"It's very stressful. I feel my life is on hold," she said. "My life is her life."

Because of Breanna's uncertain future, Judy says she has to take things as they come. "I don't know how long I'm going to have her. I treasure the good moments and try not to think of when the next bleed will be."

"I take one day at a time, sometimes one hour at a time. I try not to get my hope up too much, but it's hard when I see her come back like this," says Judy.

And because Breanna is the most important thing in Judy's life, she says the love she feels for her daughter goes beyond a normal bond between mother and child.

"We have a special relationship that I can't put into words," she said. "As sick as she gets, even in the coma, I feel she knows I'm there by her squeezing my finger or the look in her eye."

"And when she's well, the hugs she gives me make it all worthwhile."

Occasionally though, it's hard for Judy to keep her spirits up. "I do get angry and I do get frustrated," she said. "Sometimes I'm envious of other mothers who have healthy little girls running around, but as far as trading places with them, I'd never do that."

During the time when Breanna is well and home from the hospital, Judy tries to give the little girl as normal a childhood as possible.

"I don't deprive her of anything," she said. "I keep her as actively involved as I can by taking her to concerts, swimming in pools and at the lake and going to the zoo."

As tough as it gets for Judy, she says it's been possible for her to take care of Breanna because of the love and support she gets from family and friends.

Judy says her mom, Betty Trumbull, has been a "tower of strength" and her father Bernard has given a lot of love and support and made frequent Sunday visits with Breanna during her stay in Toronto.

With everyday that goes by, Judy knows it's one more day that's behind her and Breanna. Although she tries not to get her hopes up too much, she can't help thinking that Breanna will one day overcome her mysterious condition.

"The prognosis has been the same for the last two-and-a-half years," said Judy. "I keep hoping and praying that eventually she'll outgrow it."

Man put on probation for cashing bad cheques

The following cases were heard by Judge George Inrig last Wednesday in provincial court in Minden. Rick Bagg acted as Crown attorney.

JAIL SENTENCE FOR OFFENCES

Mervin E. Preston, 47, pleaded guilty to three charges of driving while under suspension in December 1989 and May 1990.

Preston, who has a long-standing alcohol problem, was previously convicted twice for impaired driving when he "fell off the wagon." Because he lives in a rural area, he drove on back roads after he lost his license, court was told.

Since the charges were laid, Preston got married, moved, and his son now drives him, said defense attorney Karen Johnston.

Judge Inrig sentenced Preston to 30 days in county jail, concurrent on all matters.

CARELESS DRIVING

Steven J. Tuckey, 27, of Thornhill, pleaded guilty to careless driving of a motorized snow vehicle and failure to produce insurance during an incident which occurred two years ago.

On January 17, 1988, Tuckey and three others were snowmobiling at the Haliburton Forest and Wildlife Reserve in Havelock Township. The machine Tuckey operated came around a curve, became airborne, and crashed into the other machine, which had stopped.

The impact damaged the other driver's leg, and destroyed the other machine.

When asked to produce insurance, the accused failed to do so.

Court was told Tuckey has a number of previous convictions, including driving without a permit and impaired driving and speeding.

Judge Inrig fined Tuckey $250 for the careless driving charge, and $500 for failure to produce insurance.

BAD CHECKS PASSED

Robert James Welch, 22, pleaded guilty to obtaining credit under $1,000 by fraud.

On August 2 and 3, Welch bought groceries at Easton's Valu-mart with cheques from an account which was closed. He bought $44.43 and $64.43 worth of groceries, and didn't clear things up after bank staff told him the account was closed because it was overdrawn.

Welch has no criminal record, and told the court he would like to make restitution as soon as he can. He recently was temporarily laid off, and had other bills to pay before making restitution, he said.

Judge Inrig suspended sentence, and put Welch on probation for one year. He must make restitution of $108.86 within three months time, and can apply for more time within the three months if necessary.

REFUSED BREATHALYZER

Ronald Townshend, 20, of Oshawa, pleaded guilty to refusing to provide a proper screening sample for the breathalyzer after being stopped for impaired driving.

On June 24, the former Wilberforce resident was driving a Dodge pick-up with three people in the box, and two in the cab.

Police followed the vehicle northbound on Highway 648 after seeing it swerve across the centre line. The police car's lights were turned on, but the accused drove one km before finally stopping.

Townshend's breath smelled of alcohol, but when asked to provide a breathalyzer sample he breathed too lightly. Even after being told it was not enough for a suitable sample, Townshend still didn't breathe hard enough on subsequent attempts, court was told.

Townshend has no previous criminal record. The judge was asked to keep in mind that Townshend's common-law wife is now pregnant, and that he last worked in August after being laid off. Now on assistance, Townshend is looking for work.

Judge Inrig fined Townshend the minimum $300, with 120 days to pay. Townshend also cannot operate a motor vehicle for a period of one year.

SEXUAL ASSAULT

A 64-year-old Monmouth man pleaded guilty to sexually assaulting three children aged 10 to seven years and failing to comply with bail conditions.

The children's mother called the Minden OPP regarding complaints from her son and two daughters regarding their neighbour, who they said had touched their genital areas on several occasions. The man was charged in July, 1989.

Judge Inrig registered a conviction on each charge, and put the man on probation. The man must attend counselling, and avoid contact with anyone under 16 years of age, and must stay away from the three children.

IMPAIRED DRIVING

Lisa L. Johnson, 22, of Scarborough, pleaded guilty to driving with her ability impaired by having more than 80 mg of alcohol in 100 ml of blood.

Johnson was stopped by police on July 26 while driving southbound on Highway 35 after she failed to dim her high beams to a passing vehicle and drove over the centre line.

Stepping out of the car, Johnson was unsteady on her feet. And a breathalyzer taken shows she was over the legal limit.

Johnson has no previous record, and was recently laid off her job, court was told.

She was fined the minimum $300, and given 120 days to pay. Johnson also cannot operate a motor vehicle for one year.

MISCHIEF WAS PROVOKED

Dean Jeffrey Thrasher, 25, pleaded guilty to charges of mischief under $1,000, and failure to appear in court.

In July, Thrasher smashed in the windshield of a 1990 Sunbird, and subsequently failed to appear in court for the matter on September 7.

Court was told on July 28, Terry Anderson and Jill Hamilton visited Thrasher in his home, where Anderson also resided. Anderson smashed the door window of the house, and smashed beer bottles inside the house.

The two women then entered the car, locked the doors, and Hamilton tried to drive away. It was then that Thrasher struck the windshield with his fist several times.

It was not known whether charges were laid against Anderson.

Thrasher said he inadvertently missed the court date. "I thought it was later," he said. "I went to the OPP station to check the date and they said it already passed, so I turned myself in."

Thrasher said he's making restitution for the car window, and that his door window is still broken.

He was previously convicted in 1986 for failure to appear in court on trespass charges in Stratford.

Judge Inrig granted an absolute discharge on the mischief charge, saying Thrasher was provoked in the matter. For the failure to appear, the judge registered a conviction and laid a $150 fine plus a $35 surcharge to be paid in 90 days.

Home Hardware earns fifth straight victory

Week number five of the Minden Men's Hockey League saw Home Hardware add to their winning streak by beating Sid Stamp Fuels in a game that had almost as many penalties as goals.

Ben Manuge scored the only goal of the first period to give Home a 1-0 lead. Manuge added to that lead by scoring the lead-off goal in the second period as well.

By the end of the second period, Home had taken command of the game as Jeff Stamp scored two more goals and Ed Gibbons added another to put Home ahead 5-0.

Brian Shaw finally managed to put Stamp Fuels on the scoreboard with his goal, but Jeff Stamp came back and scored his third of the period to give Home a 6-1 lead going into the third period.

The Stamp players came out hard in the third period and made up some ground on Home with goals by Brian Shaw and Lou Reynolds. Jeff Stamp scored his fifth goal and Home lead by a score of 7-3.

Craig Crowe scored for Stamp and Shaw rounded out his hat-trick, but Home hung to win the game 7-5, their fifth straight victory.

Of the eight penalties called during the game, Stamp player Ivan Ingram lead the pack with penalties for holding, charging and a game misconduct.

In the second game of last Monday's action, Rockcliffe Tavern won their second straight game and pulled into a tie for second place in the league by trouncing The Times 10-3.

The first period was all Rockcliffe as the team scored six unanswered goals led by Harold Cowen with a hat-trick. Scoring

Redmen lose to St. Pete's

Wyatt Nesbitt lets fly with a shot that will elude the net minder and register as the second goal for the HHSS Redmen Wednesday night. The Redmen lost the game against Peterborough's St. Petes by a final score of 6-2. The visitors captured a strong lead in the first period with four unanswered goals, adding a single in each of the two remaining periods. Mike Vuksic score the Redmen's first goal at 4:48 of the second period and Nesbitt rounded out the Haliburton scoring at 14:17 of the third period. The next game for the Redmen is Tuesday in Fenelon Falls and they return home to host Crestwood on Wednesday. Season's tickets for Redmen games are now on sale see Gary Brohman for details.

PeeWees earn tie, win

Friday, November 9

At the start of the season things looked very shaky for the Minden PeeWee B team, with five new players who have never played hockey before there was a tough time ahead.

On finding out who was to be their coach my mind was put at rest, John Dettman with the help of Bill Redgrave managed to get the boys playing as a team, thanks guys!

On Friday night the team travelled to Bobcaygeon where they were in for a very tough game, the first period being the start with Bobcaygeon scoring within the first few seconds of play. Minden fought hard and with some excellent passes, Arron Belton scored when Marty Dettman passed the puck assisted by Paul Murry.

Minden kept up the pressure but Bob came through to score a second goal with eight seconds left on the clock.

Thesecond period started with Minden attacking Bob's goal time and again which led to them scoring when Todd Redgrave scored on a pass by Scott Carpenter to tie the game.

During this period Minden were two men down which left John Dettman with a tough decision, but he played the players who could do the best job at that time, and the fans were to see some excellent skating and skills with Bob being unable to even make the blue line (way to go Daniel, Marty and Todd).

Back to full strength Minden kept the pressure on and scored a third goal when Todd Redgrave scored unassisted, Minden only had minutes to hold Bob off, but during a scuffle in front of the goal a shot from Bob deflected into the goal to tie the game at 3-3.

During the third period both teams played well with both defense and goalies tightening play to leave the score at 3-3.

Saturday, November 10

Today the PeeWee B team travelled to Beaverton where the fans were to see excellent hockey and team play. Minden's game on Friday gave the team some excellent practice which really showed, as they put the pressure on Beaverton when Andrew Crego scored on a pass from Marty Dettman after minutes of play.

Beaverton were not going to be left behind and came straight back with a goal to tie the game, then scored a second to take the lead.

Minden stepped up the play and were rewarded when Arron Belton scored on a pass from Todd Redgrave to tie the game 2-2.

Minden were determined to take the lead and we were to see great team play, when Benji Crego passed to Todd Redgrave to score Minden's third goal.

Minden's defense played well and were able to hold Beaverton back which gave Minden the chance to secure the game with their fourth goal which was scored by Andrew Crego assisted by Todd Redgrave and Arron Belton.

4-2 to Minden.

Hartwick defaults game again

the other first-period goals were Joe Graham, Jason Stamp and Jeff Howe.

The Times finally managed a goal when Daryl Ward beat Rockcliffe goalie Rob Crowe but Stamp and Howe netted two more to give Rockcliffe a 8-1 lead going into the third period.

Graham scored his second of the night, and Stamp added his third to put Rockcliffe ahead by a commanding 10-1 score. The Times' Doug Allison managed to score two goals in the third to make the score 10-3.

The third scheduled match was supposed to be Westside Jug City against Hartwick Insurance, but for the second week in a row, Hartwick failed to get a team on the ice and Westside took the win by default.

Stanhope protests GST, hires accounting assistance

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

Stanhope is adding its name to the growing list of municipalities that object to the federal government's proposed Goods and Services Tax.

At last Wednesday's meeting, council passed a resolution opposing the GST in response to letters from the City of North York and the Réseau Pro-Canada Network.

While they supported the attempts to stop the tax, Stanhope councillors said it probably won't have any effect on the government's plans.

"If Brian (Mulroney) hasn't got the message now, he never will," said councillor Murray Daniels. "I support it, but I think you're beating a dead horse."

The letter from the Réseau Pro-Canada Network, signed by Toronto Mayor Art Eggleton, Elstow Mayor Brad Cabana and Dartmouth Mayor John Savage, outlines some of the concerns the proposed tax has raised.

"Our country is now in a recession," says the letter. "With its attendant unemployment, bankruptcies and general hardships, this recession makes the prospect of the implementation of the Goods and Services Tax an even greater concern to Canadians."

The Network, which represents Mayors from large and small municipalities across the country, is alarmed that the tax will hit low income earners the hardest and is unnecessary because there are other alternatives.

"What is clear is that this burden should be borne proportionately," says the letter. "And that it not be used as a vehicle for plunging our nation into an economic quagmire."

"Canadians across the country, and across party lines, have expressed dismay and anger over the Federal Government's disregard for their strongly held opposition to this tax."

"We, the Mayors and Councillors are the elected representatives with the closest relationship to our communities. It is incumbent upon us to stand up and represent their wishes."

The Network's letter urges councils to draft a letter asking the Senate to defeat the tax or to the Federal Government asking that plans for the GST be withdrawn.

Stanhope council also agreed to hire a Peterborough accounting firm to help the township prepare for the additional administration the GST will require.

In a letter to the township Humpage, Taylor, McDonald and Company offered to provide a range of services to help prepare for the tax.

"This service is a must," said Davis. "We don't know where we're going without it."

Clerk-Treasurer Gerald Bain said municipal staff members have attended seminars on the GST that explained the general concept of the tax but failed to go into detail about the necessary accounting procedures that will accompany it.

The estimated cost of the service is between $1,700 and $2,200.

Stanhope joins Minden, Lutterworth and Haliburton County Council in opposing the GST.

Land swindler arrested

A man convicted of fraud charges involving real estate speculation in Haliburton County has been arrested by Toronto police following his deportation from the Dominican Republic.

Tomas Reinis, age 35, was picked up at Pearson International Airport on Oct. 31, by Metro police officers, six years after pleading guilty to conspiracy to defraud the public.

The charge stems from the years 1982 to 1984 when Reinis was involved in land speculation in cottage country including Haliburton and Victoria counties, Muskoka, Parry Sound and Simcoe.

According to Metro police, Reinis, two managers and a number of salesmen, had been selling land fraudulently. The property was presented as being capable of having building permits issued, roadways were to be constructed and hydro lines erected, all of which was untrue.

In addition, some purchasers were shown one property but received a deed for another, smaller in area or in some instances swamp land.

In April 1984, Reinis and the two managers were arrested and charged with conspiracy to commit fraud and related offences. After a two-week preliminary hearing in Nov. 1984, the accused parties changed their plea to guilty and were put over to January 1985 for sentencing.

Reinis failed to appear before the court for sentencing and was sentenced in absentia to three-and-a-half years on the fraud convictions and was also charged with failing to appear in court.

Reinis will begin serving his original sentence and will be tried on the failure to appear charge.

THE FUTURE IS R'S

If we want a good future to be ours, then we have to change our ways of living and treatment of the earth's resources.

There are some things that individuals and families can do to help the environment such as the following 3 R's--Reduce, Reuse and Recycle. We can reduce the amount of garbage we take to the landfill site by composting, recycling cans and bottles, plastic bottles and newspapers and Reusing as much as possible. We can use cloth bags instead of plastic ones, and refuse to buy products which are over-packaged. Also, we can reduce our use of disposable products such as diapers, styrofoam cups and paper towels. To conserve energy, we can walk or ride bikes when possible instead of driving cars. Turning down the temperature a couple of degrees, even if you have to wear a sweater, also saves energy.

These things can help, but I don't think its enough. We have to get the governments involved to solve this world-wide problem. Not just one town or country can save the environment. It has to be a global effort.

Locally, we can get the municipality to have fine paper and plastic recycling along with cans, bottles, newspapers and plastic bottles.

I think the Canadian government should encourage companies to minimize the toxic waste they produce and find ways to convert toxic chemicals into safer ones. The government should also support companies which are recycling and are trying to find better ways to recycle.

Internationally, governments from different countries should get together to share ideas and to make plans. Together they might be able to stop rainforest destruction in countries like Brazil.

People are learning a lot about environmental problems and hopefully, we will act to make changes for a better environment, so we have a good world to live in when we are adults.

Thank You!

THE TIMES is pleased to have co-ordinated this contest for the students in our community. It was obvious from the entries in both divisions that our young people are keenly aware of the problems confronting the environment and are concerned about its future. Their attitude and outlook is most encouraging. This contest, and prizes, would not have been possible without the support of these community-minded businesses. OUR THANKS TO:

Report from Haliburton County Home Support Services

From Haliburton County Home Support Services' Orientation/Constitution Committee, Helen Henderson, Chairperson.

Since our Brainstorming Session at an Open Meeting on October 12 at the Canadian Legion in Haliburton Village, our Orientation/Constitution Committee has been busy with many meetings, including a Board of Directors meeting, at which a report of our activities was given and further direction received.

From these various meetings, we have finally managed an agreement on Article I - Name and Geographic Area; Article II - Mission Statement, Goals and Objectives; Article III - Membership, Membership Eligibility, Voting Membership, Non-voting Membership, Membership Fees; Article IV - Directorate; Article V - Election; Article VI - Responsibilities of the Directorate; Article VII - Executive - also Quorum - Proxies and Election of Executive.

Haliburton County Home Support Services is a non-profit community based agency which has assumed responsibility for the delivery of key services to Seniors and Disabled Persons who require some measure of support to remain independent within their own homes. Incorporated in 1980 HCHSS has grown in size to the point where it employs four paid staff and benefits from the contribution of time and energy from some 220 active volunteers. Among its array of programmes, HCHSS operated Meals on Wheels, Wheels to Meals, Home Help, Friendly Visiting, Fone a Friend, Transportation, Social Recreational Services, Alzheimer's Support, Emergency Response System, Hearing Test/Infra Red System.

In an effort to be responsive to the needs of the community, HCHSS has initiated two separate Needs Assessment studies (most recently in 1986) and undertook a Strategic Planning Exercise which culminated in 1989 with a report detailing new initiatives for the Agency.

However, the emerging provincial policy directions embodied in the Long Term Care Review process has made it time for HCHSS to review its operations and to consider recommendations related to its future development.

To this end, a Project Management Committee - Members being: Adele Barnes, President, Helen Henderson, Board of Directors representative, Donna Pacey, Executive Director, Hadden Gillespie, Community Representative, John Lohrenz, Ministry of Com-

EMERGENCY: Seminar offers tips on safety for adults and children in the streets and at home

by Susan Grober

Thank God it doesn't happen here. That's a recurring comment expressed by a small, but interested crowd of people that turned out for a Personal Safety Seminar held last Tuesday at Archie Stouffer Elementary School.

The topic was personal safety, both in the streets and in the home, for adults and children. And the message was clear: while Haliburton County may be safer than Toronto, violence can occur in the streets, and is all too often a common experience in the home.

About 23 women, men and children heard presentations from Minden OPP Constable Mike Maybee, Annegreth Gerrard of the YWCA Women's Safety Network, Karoul Talaba and Becky McPherson of Kinark, and Eric Lilius of the Haliburton Family Violence Men's Group.

Maybee began his presentation by showing a 1972 film, Lady Beware, as part of his presentation and, although the film was old, much of its advice certainly wasn't.

In the film, the four basics of personal safety for women could be remembered by the word SAFE: Secure, Avoid, Flee and Engage.

The film encourages you to secure your home with locks and peepholes, to comply if someone threatens you for money or valuables, to carefully observe the appearance of an assailant, to be wary of telephone callers who ask for personal information, and to have someone accompany you to your car even if it's only a short distance away.

Adhesive tape can be put on a car key so it can be found immediately, and you should check the interior of your car to make sure no one is inside before entering.

Important phone numbers:

ONTARIO PROVINCIAL POLICE..... 1-800-461-6488

AMBULANCE..... 457-1721

YWCA WOMEN'S SAFETY NETWORK..... 457-3355 or
1-800-461-7656 (No charge, 24 hours)

MINDEN HOSPITAL..... 286-2288
HALIBURTON HOSPITAL..... 457-1392

One thing to avoid is going out alone, but if you must go out you should stick to well-lit streets. "Taking shortcuts means taking risks," said the film's moderator, actress Shirley Jones.

If you live alone, camouflage your sex by using only your first initial in the phone book or outside your apartment door. You could also make up a fictitious husband or room-mate to list with your name.

It's important to check your car for gas, oil and water before venturing out, especially at night. If you do have trouble and can't get to a phone, raise the car hood and wait inside with the doors locked.

If you see a patrol car, flash your lights and blow your horn. If one isn't around, wait until one arrives. The film suggested ignoring help offered by a stranger. "Don't worry about hurting people's feelings. He'll get over it, you may not."

If the first two steps are not successful, and someone breaks into your home or accosts you in the street, the film suggests that you flee and try to phone police immediately.

If that doesn't work, you can engage your assailant by fighting for your life. A scream can scare off an attacker or call for help. And a woman can carry an arsenal of weapons, such as combs, nail files, and hairspray, in her purse.

"Be ready to try every dirty trick in the book." However, the film warned against using a weapon if the assailant is armed. In that case, try anything from screaming to soft words and fainting. Whatever seems like it will work.

After the film, Maybee said people must keep up good safety practices as a personal routine. "Maybe you won't need it in this county, but you all leave the county at one time or another," he said.

To begin her segment, Annegreth Gerrard pointed out that taking precautions makes most people feel safe. But for one-eighth of the women in Canada who are assaulted by their husbands or boyfriends there isn't even safety in their own homes.

For these women, home "is a place of pain, hurt and degradation, explosive anger and sometimes even death," she said, pointing out that one in every five murders in Canada is a result of domestic violence.

"Bad things happen to people who do all the right things. They take precautions, and still they are not safe."

Gerrard said it makes the general public feel safer if they believe such violence is the victim's fault. "It leads to excuses for the perpetrator, like he did it because he lost his job, or his mother was sick."

Over the years, Gerrard has tried to determine what makes men use violence against their loved ones. And she feels a recent article in the Ottawa Citizen makes plausible sense.

"It said violence is done because it works," explained Gerrard. Men can instigate their power by wielding an iron fist. "Also, for men, it is socially acceptable to be violent," she said.

She explained this wide-spread attitude must change, just as drinking and driving has become increasingly unacceptable amongst people who used to live by the credo, one more for the road.

"We as a community have to take a stand and be aware of the problem," said Gerrard. "We have to say to our neighbours that we will not put up with it anymore."

Gerrard pointed out the Safety Network has two shelters in Peterborough and one being built in Lindsay, and transportation is provided for those in need. There is also going to be a mental health centre built in Haliburton to further help alleviate the problem, she said.

About 10 men in the county are taking a brave step to make changes in their lives by seeking help through the local men's violence group co-led by Eric Lilius for the past five years.

Lilius said all the men are self-referred, and they discuss ways of expressing anger without violence. The meetings are video-taped and sent to a consultant who offers advice.

"It seems to have a fairly high rate of success," said Lilius, who is proud of the group's achievements.

Caught in the middle of domestic violence are children, and Karoul Talaba shared their experience with the audience.

Children often feel responsible for the fighting that goes on between their parents, she said. They blame themselves for getting poor grades, leaving their bike out or wearing out their shoes, and feel such things made their father angry.

"I tell them that the problem is their dad doesn't know how to deal with their mother," said Talaba.

Children also feel anguish and rage against their father, want to protect their mother, and live paralyzed with fear for their own lives.

They re-experience the trauma through nightmares, intense daydreaming, and physical ailments such as stomach aches, headaches and sore, tight throats.

Children recreate the trauma in their play, as boys become aggressors and girls become passive, helpless, willing victims, said Talaba.

Ideally, the mother is in the best position to help the child, she said. But in the normal healing process, the child will blame the mother and sympathize with the father. This isn't something the mother should be subject to, so it's a good idea that the child receive outside counselling.

Children become watchers in the abusive home, looking out for their mother's well-being and gauging their father's rage. "It's like living next to a volcano, and not knowing whether it will blow up," said Talaba.

Often, the children risk physical harm by coming between their mom and dad in an attempt to stop the fighting.

Talaba suggested these children be briefed on safety issues in the house, such as the most supportive neighbour, escape routes in the house to go for help, and a spot to hide from the fight such as in their closet or under the bed.

Children with abusive families base their lives on shame and hold many secrets, she said. "They keep the silence, and it's a big, heavy responsibility." They don't have friends over, and they don't visit friends because they want to be there for their mother if she gets hurt.

If they are to avoid having problems when they grow older, these children must learn proper conflict resolution and changing gender roles, said Talaba.

"Things have changed since fairy tale days," she said. "We are not Snow White, and we can't wait for the man on the white horse to save us, although some of us are still waiting for that man on the white horse."

Becky McPherson discussed street-proofing children, and offered hints on personal safety in the community.

"The goal is not to scare them," she stressed. "We can do more harm that way and make the children become withdrawn and have nightmares. It can be very damaging."

Streetproofing begins at a very early age, from the time a child begins to say no, she said.

Before a child can be confident enough to say no to a stranger, parents have to prove they respect that child's right to say no. If you tickle a child and they say no, you stop. If the child says no to kissing Aunt Mary, let them give her a handshake or just say goodbye.

The child can be given an identification package with the child's name, address and phone number, and taught who to give it to if they get lost. Police officers or others in a uniform, or a mother can most likely be trusted, said McPherson. If they are in a mall, a sales clerk could probably be a good person to approach, she said.

When the child is old enough, teach him his full name, address and phone number, and how to make a phone call without money by dialing "O" for the operator.

"It doesn't have to be scary, it can be fun," McPherson said of the safety lessons. Cut pictures out of a magazine and ask the child who they would approach for help. Tell them they need a better reason than, "That guy looks like Uncle Ted," to trust a person.

McPherson suggested against advertising a child's name on his clothing or toys. That puts an abductor at an advantage — the child will think the stranger knows him, and feel embarrassed for not recognizing him.

She also suggested using a password with kids. If someone wants to get inside the house, or pick him up from school, he has to know the password.

Never leave your children unattended, even if they are just sitting in the running car waiting for you at the milk store.

And if your child tells you about a stranger he had contact with, don't punish the child. He probably knows it was wrong, and you don't want him to start keeping secrets out of fear of punishment.

With teenagers, the same thing applies, said McPherson. Keep the lines of communication open. "When they admit to something, they know it's wrong, so don't yell and don't make it into a lecture. Just talk with them. Use TV shows as examples, or newspaper clippings."

Constable Maybee agreed, adding "parents are too-often one-way. They're always asking their kids where they're going. But you also have to tell your kids where you're going."

Many of the problems discussed can be found in the area, and others are more inherent in urban areas.

But when it comes down to calling for help, there is one problem which often occurs in an area like Haliburton County which has no street numbers and sometimes no street names: "How many people here can describe where you live?" asked Maybee.

When you call for help, the person you're calling is in Peterborough if it's for the OPP, and in Lindsay if it's for an ambulance, he said.

"You can't give lot and concession numbers because there could be 20 other houses on that lot and concession," explained Maybee. "So you have to start with things that don't move and don't change. Start with something fixed, like 2.2 km from the bridge on the way to Minden from wherever. And make sure you know whether you're going north or south."

When asked about the usefulness of identification kits which include a child's fingerprints, Maybee said the sad reality is those are only helpful when a missing child has turned up dead.

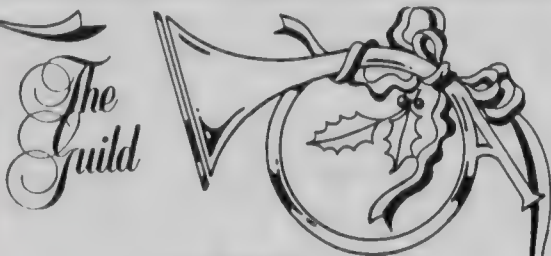

This disturbing reminder proves prevention is the key to self-protection.

Reader resents Black's language stand

Editor:

Before Arthur Black damns English, he should do some damn research! While I admire much of his writing as outrageously funning, I find nothing humorous in outrageous statements based on poppycock!

In 1066, when William the Bastard, Duke of Normandy, invaded England, the Anglo-Saxon language had 100,000 words. Since then, over 900,000 have been added. Does Art expect us to believe that half these additions are French? Doesn't he realize (a) that French is a dying language, (b) that French has the world's poorest vocabulary, (c) that Grench must depend on English for such everyday expressions as "le weekend"?

Why wouldn't a syndicated columnist check the accuracy of his facts before slamming the medium in which he earns his weekly bread? How does Art get the nerve to claim that Billy the Bastard gave us a language that is half French and, therefore, not worth saving from Robert the Rascalion, aka Bourassa?

Perhaps Art is jossing us? Perhaps he knows that, in 1066, half England was Danish and that 1,000 Danish words (including the lovely "sky") survive in English, with many thousands more in the dialects? Perhaps this fun-loving historian knows that only one third of the Norman conquerer's vast army was Norman, the rest being mercenaries from all over Europe, including Germany, Italy and Spain? That's one heck of a stupid way to spread the French word, if that were William's intention!

In any case, he failed. Saxon underlyings helped salvage English by using a curious double language, some of which survives: law and order, hue and cry. Two hundred years after the Norman invasion, fewer than 1,000 French words had invaded English.

Art gives us a list of 19 words, all French, he claims. But only two of these—abbot and war—entered English in the eleventh century. If Art had a good etymological dictionary, he'd know that "abbot" derives from Latin "abba-dem", while "war" is from Old French "werre" and Teutonic "werra". All the other words in Art's list entered English from Latin (via French) in the 12th to 14th centuries, long after the Battle of Hastings. One puzzling aspect: when Art claims "bible" as a French word, doesn't he mean French spelling? Surely, when "bible" first appears as "biblia" in four other languages (Greek, Latin, Spanish, Portuguese) one may hardly call it French?

Two of Art's "Norman French" words hold special interest. "Verdict" derives from Old English and Old French "verdit", meaning "true-said". It became "verdictum" in medieval Latin, then "verdict" in modern English and modern French; a curious example of reverse derivation! What a treasure is "treasure"! the Latin word "thesaurus", which the Roman-dominated Gauls pronounced "tresaurus", became "trésor" in Old French and Old English and "treasure" in 16th-century English. but the jaunty Scots, uninfluenced by the Normans, went back to basics to spell their word THESAUR!

Art may be a humorous writer, but if he's rude to me I'll be rude right back. I don't consider myself "terminally paranoid" because I agree with APEC (Association for the Preservation of English in Canada) that, if Quebec wants to be unilingually French to the dismay of its Anglophone minority, the rest of Canada should be unilingually English. And if Francophones don't like that, they can (a) learn English, (b) continue to speak French using interpreters as needed (c) go live in Quebec (d) emigrate to France.

Battle on the Plains of Abraham should have settled question

Do I display a "tiny mind" and a "stunted soul" when I dare to point out that Canada never had to founding nations equally entitled to their own language? The French were decisively defeated in battle. That staunch Britisher, James Wolfe, gave his life on the Plains of Abraham that this letter (and this newspaper) might be printed in English. At confederation, more than 200 years later, the only two places in Canada where French was recognized were Ottawa's House of Parliament and Quebec's National Assembly where, be it noted, the Anglophone minority was guaranteed 25% of the seats; today the provincial legislature is 99% Francophone. Can anyone imagine the Americans going bilingual after thrashing the Mexicans and annexing more than half their territory?

As for Art's whole-hearted approval of billion-dollar bilingualism on cornflake packages, most of it wasted, here's a good place to study French deficiencies that will eventually lead to the language's unimpaired disappearance. French occupies more space. Regarding cornflakes, it takes seven French words to say "Heat them to make them more crisp", whereas the far crisper English does it in three: "Heating ensures crispness".

When I lived in Mexico, I tried to learn Spanish. On entering a bank, I used the glass door marked "Entrada" because the one marked "Salida" was printed backwards. I didn't expect bilingual signs, and neither should Ontario's Francophones. The words "Entrée" and "Sortie" on post office doors are a waste of time and money. When I see "Entrée", I think of food. When I see "Sortie", I think of the Battle of Britain, when my country stood almost alone to ensure that this letter (and this newspaper) may appear in English rather than German.

When I came to Canada in 1949, I enjoyed all the privileges of a Canadian without having to swear everlasting allegiance. I suppose it had something to do with Britain's wartime performance. Now, 41 years later, all is forgotten; I can't even vote in a municipal election. Yes, Art, you're right, damn it! Canada's attitude has changed: it's no longer live and let live! But there's one thing I'm determined will live: it's English! Vive l'anglais!

Pete Stickland,

Residents worry about local wetlands

Editor:

Three Lake Kashagawigamog Organized executive members attended a public meeting recently concerning Dysart's upcoming Official Plan. I expressed concern that no provisions are in place to protect the few remaining wetland areas on the Lake Kashagawigamog chain. According to the town planner, the lands designated "conservation" are merely "difficult to build on." There is no long-term plan (through zoning by-laws) to protect wetlands anywhere in the county in spite of strong recommendations from MNR to do so.

I have read a document provided to Dysart over two years ago in which MNR suggests appropriate wording for policy statements, land use guidelines and actual zoning by-laws pertaining to wetland protection. To date, these well-reasoned and timely recommendations are conspicuously absent from the Official Plan.

Wetlands not only provide valuable habitat and nesting areas for fish, birds and other wildlife but they also maintain and improve water quality, help control flooding, and contribute substantial social, aesthetic, and economic benefits through recreational and tourism-related activities. Without proper zoning, wetlands will continue to be filled in, dredged out, or built upon until the life is squeezed out of them.

MNR has developed a comprehensive and objective method for identifying and classifying wetlands according to a Provincial Evaluation System. Each township (or better still, Haliburton County) could use this system to determine which wetlands in the township (and/or county) are most significant and thus most worthy of protection. It is not too late to take this important first step toward saving at least some of the remaining wetlands under our stewardship.

Deputy-Reeve's actions on park confusing; reader

Editor:

The antics of Council member Bern Berry are becoming more and more baffling.

The only thing that he has accomplished is to anger the business community and all the people in general with his negative actions.

His latest caper takes the cake. He led the fight to sell 6 acres of prime land behind the arena for $40,000 which may be paid years down the road.

However, he complains that 3 acres of land for a senior complex, which needs a lot of fill, is far too low. Besides supplying an important service to the community, the return in dollars to the taxpayers will be far more with the senior complex than with the county building.

Incidentally, I wonder who is going to pay for the new county building.

Dorset Acid Rain Report

The following report on precipitation events was recorded at the Ministry of Environment acid rain testing station in Dorset and compiled by Environment Canada.

This report covers the period of November 4 to November 10.

November 4, 1 mm rain, 4.1 pH, from Michigan and Lake Huron.

November 5, 42 mm mixed rain and snow, 4.3 pH, from western New York and Pennsylvania.

November 6, 1 mm mixed rain and snow, 5.0 pH, from Lake Huron and Lake Superior.

November 7, 5 cm snow, 4.6 pH, from Lake Huron and Lake Superior.

November 9, 1 cm snow, 4.1 pH, from southern Ontario and Ohio.

November 10, 1 mm mixed rain and snow, 4.4 pH, from Lake Huron.

Environmental damage is usually observed in sensitive areas regularly receiving precipitation with pH less than 4.7. Readings of 4.0 pH or less are considered dangerous. The lower the reading, the more acidic the precipitation.

DECEMBERBright and Colourful Stars
of Winter

Most brilliant stars are above the eastern horizon at map time (around 10:30 p.m. at the beginning of the month, two hours earlier at the end). This year, none of them are as bright as nearby Mars and Jupiter; these planets add tremendously to the beauty of the winter sky.

Begin a survey with Sirius, blazing brilliantly a little south of east. Sweep up and around in a clockwise direction to locate the others. First is Procyon, in the constellation Canis Minor; then Pollux and Castor in Gemini. High in the east are Capella, the "Goat Star" in Auriga, and Aldebaran in Taurus, the Bull. Rigel and Betelgeuse, in Orion, complete the array. Rigel is a little above and west of Sirius; Betelgeuse is inside the huge oval comprising the most impressive stellar display of any season.

Stars display a variety of colours so subtle they may go unnoticed by a casual observer. With patience, the range from white to blue, and from yellow to orange to a reddish hue, can be seen and enjoyed.

The uninitiated may begin with the stars mentioned above.

Colour reveals something about the temperature and the stage in the life cycle of a star. Consider Rigel and Betelgeuse, the two brightest stars in Orion, for example. To locate Orion, look for a large rectangle of four bright stars (at map time its long axis lies roughly parallel to the horizon) with a distinctive trio of stars standing vertically near its centre. The contrast of the blue-white brilliance of Rigel and the steady deep-orange hue of Betelgeuse, is quite striking. Both are giant stars, much larger than the Sun. Young and fast-burning, Rigel's blue-white colour is evidence of its extremely high temperature. As indicated by its red colour, Betelgeuse is a cool star. At a late stage in its life cycle, it has swollen to a low-density shell so much larger than the Sun that it would extend beyond the orbit of Mars.

Once the strong colour contrast of stars such as Rigel and Betelgeuse is recognized, it is easier to detect more subtle tints. Aldebaran, for example, has been described as a rosy star, and Capella as yellow, like our Sun.

Atmospheric refraction causes stars to scintillate colourfully when they are low in the sky. Sirius and Capella are prime examples. Early in the evening in December, when Sirius has just risen, it is extremely colourful, displaying red, blue, green and white. (The name "Sirius" means "scorching.") When it climbs higher, beyond the more intense influence of atmospheric refraction, it is still a brilliant—though far less "flashy"—spectacle. Capella, another brilliant star, gleams more sedately now than it does in autumn, when it sparkles low in the northeast.

Colour is not restricted to stars. Mars is aptly called the "Red Planet." Photographs of the Martian surface, relayed to Earth by two Mariner spacecraft, reveal why. Rusty-orange coloured soil and rocks and intense wind-blown storms of red dust raging on its surface are responsible.

Planets

Mercury and Saturn are low in the west just after sunset. Mercury, elusive as usual, is only visible in mid December but is too near the horizon to be seen with ease. Saturn is somewhat better situated but it, too, sets shortly after sunset. Mars and Jupiter are the prominent evening planets now. Mars is a little south of the Pleiades star cluster, well up in the east at sunset, and sets after midnight. Jupiter, somewhat brighter, rises in the east in mid evening, and is high in the west at sunrise; it is the brightest object in the predawn sky.

Report from Ottawa

With Bill Scott, MP

On November 1, 1990, Prime Minister Brian Mulroney announced the creation of a Citizens' Forum on Canada's Future to encourage dialogue with and among Canadians and encourage the creation of a new consensus about Canada and our future. The Forum will provide the government with a summary of its findings by July 1, 1991. The results and reports will be made available to all Canadians.

The Citizens' Forum is being chaired by CRTC Chairman Keith Spicer. Eleven other Canadians are serving on an advisory group: Richard Cashin, Carole Corcoran, Fil Fraser, Thomas Kierans, Robert Normand, Therese Paquet-Sevigny, Roger Tasse, Susan Van De Welde, Elsie Wayne, Jack Webster and Helena Zukowski.

The Forum has a mandate to give Canadians from all regions, linguistic, ethnic and cultural backgrounds, and walks of life an opportunity to discuss the values and characteristics fundamental to Canada's well-being. It will obtain Canadians' views on:

- What they value most about their country, province and community;

- What characteristics they consider fundamentally Canadian;

- What they think are the major challenges Canada faces in the coming decade, and what actions citizens and governments should take in the face of those challenges to strengthen Canada's fundamental characteristics and reinforce our shared values;

- What policies, programs and attitudes might make it easier for Canadians to feel free, equal and respected as fellow citizens; and

- What approaches might strengthen the sense of uniqueness, participation, freedom and solidarity of Canada's regions, cultures and people.

(more on page 35)

Forum will study unity

Residents enjoy Christmas shopping and Disney classic Bambi

Hello Senior League readers. It really looks like winter today. Thursday was Tea Party time again. The ladies of the Eastern Star of the Haliburton area served us. The ladies were Neva Holden, Edith Johnson, Babe Falkner, Isabella Moody, Pearl Smith, Claudia Holden, Diane Blanchard and Nancy Tayton who played the piano so beautifully while we were having tea. It was abundant and delicious. We thank them sincerely. As well as the tea, Doris had asked the residents to dress especially nicely because she was going to have a Resident Photo Day, and take as many pictures as she could for our photo albums.

In the evening as we played bingo, called by Marg Prentice, Bev Pettes and Reg Curl. Thank you for a very enjoyable evening.

Friday morning, we were to be ready to go on the bus to Huntsville for shopping. We had just finished breakfast when the fire alarm went off. We were all soon seated in the auditorium until the cause was located.

Senior League

by Winnifred Barnum

Finally, the culprit was found and after all this, we were on the road by the time we expected to be. Each resident had a volunteer to help them during the trip, and we were well looked after. It was a very happy day for all. Those who went were Lillian James with Ellen Holden, Pearl Lyle with Jean Hewitt, Jean Taylor with Pearl Durant, Mary Smith with Ruth Ann Brohm, Alice Todd with Lenore Prentice, Gladys Whyte with Jean Robson, Nancy Carefoot with Mary Guillemin, Marie McPhail with Pat Bradburn, Ethel Shaw with Mary Orpanna, Grace Coburn with Angela O'Neil, Winnie Barnum with Lorraine King and Dianna Morris helped Doris Robertson with her shopping. While we were away, volunteers Don Holden and Bonnie Fullan set up and managed the Happy Hour for those who were unable to go to Huntsville.

Friday evening the Four Grandfathers were here to entertain us with music and singing. They were Bill Payne, Eldon Deacon, Don Burch and Charlie Hadley. We enjoyed it very much and thank them immensely.

Sunday night chapel service was conducted by Rev. John Burgess and Alice Jones played the organ. We thank them very much. Rev. Burgess certainly explains every part of a verse so you can't help but understand its real meaning.

Congratulations to Ellen Bastien as she celebrated her birthday November 13. Happy birthday, Ellen.

Monday evening Fern and Bill Donnelly were here to show the movies. It was their first time to run the projector, but after a slow start they soon had no trouble. The movies were "Fiddles and Whimmy Diddles" and "Buffy the Bored Raccoon."

Monday at 1:00 we were very happy to have Evelyn Coleman back for our bible study hour. We were sorry to hear of her recent bereavement in the death of her dear sister. Evelyn is starting the study of the women in the new testament.

Tuesday, Pastor James Fast took the chapel service. Thank you Pastor Fast.

Wednesday afternoon was spent watching a video about the little fawn called Bambi. A few of us were at Arts and Crafts. In the evening Kathy Owens came to Hyland Crest to entertain us with music and song.

Isabel Keefer, who is on the office staff, is on sick leave at the present. We all wish her a speedy return to good health.

Doris has been on a week's vacation, cooking for a hunting camp. I hope she enjoys herself.

Don't Forget

Hyland Crest Tea & Bazaar to be held November 20 from 2:00 to 4:00. Admission is free, the tea is $2.00.

There will be crafts and a bake table.

Hi Kids!
Here is another puzzle for you with a word list. Look in the diagram of letters for the words given

Circle the words in the diagram and cross it off the list.

It's as easy as that. Have fun!

Too much emphasis placed on the state of the economy

The economy is an overriding political concern at all levels of government. But there is something about our current economic system that is fundamentally flawed and ultimately destructive socially and environmentally.

In part, it's because it is built on the absurd notion of the necessity for constant growth. Cessation of growth is perceived to be catastrophic for the economy even though we live in a finite world in which endless growth is impossible.

Our economy is made possible by the fact that we, as biological beings, exist on the earth's productivity. Yet we are told that we need continued economic growth to afford a clean environment. So we rip up the earth's productive capacity in order to keep on growing, even though this conflicts with the most fundamental rule in economics — you don't spend all of your capital if you want to avoid bankruptcy.

Economists have provided us with various ways to assess the "health" of the economy; for example, the gross national product, which is the total market value of all goods and services in society created in a year.

The GNP is a sacred measure of annual economic growth and positively encourages environmental degradation.

A standing old growth forest, a wild caribou herd, an unused pure aquifer, a deep sea vent or an undammed watershed — which have immeasurable ecological values and perform countless "services" in the total planetary biosphere — do not register on the GNP. Only when people find a way to exploit them for financial returns does the GNP go up.

The GNP is also devoid of assessments of the social and environmental costs associated with the increase in goods and services.

Suppose a major fire at a chemical or nuclear plant or pollution from a pulp mill spreads toxic compounds over a vast area and many people become very sick. More nurses, doctors, hospitals, janitors, medicines, etc. will be needed — so the GNP goes up!

If people begin to die as a result of that exposure to toxic substances, then there's greater demand for undertakers, caskets, flowers, air travel for mourners.

Reflections

by David Suzuki

grave diggers and lawyers — the GNP rises further!

As Ralph Nader has said "Every time there's a car accident, the GNP goes up."

The GNP is so preposterous that it went up in 1989 because of the Exxon Valdez oil spill, the greatest marine disaster in American history! The GNP does not register the quality and quantity of clean air, water, soil and biological diversity.

And what about the things that don't result in the exchange of money?

The very glue that keeps the social fabric of communities and families intact does not involve money and therefore is invisible to the GNP. The person who opts to be a full-time parent fails to register economically while paid babysitters, nannies and daycare workers do.

All of the volunteer services performed at many levels of society — care for the elderly, the disabled or the mentally handicapped — do not register on the GNP.

One of my associates belongs to the Lions Club and spends weeks every year preparing for a road race for quadriplegics. He enjoys it immensely while

Dear Clients of Intra Town & Country Travel in Minden:

INTRATown and Country Travel has been serving Haliburton County for 3 years. One year ago we opened our Minden agency, when we realized many of our clients were from there. Our objective was to try and build a business and provide more convenient service to this area of the county.

Due to a number of reasons, including the current economic climate, we have decided for the moment to consolidate our efforts, and close our branch in Minden, until which time there is a demand large enough to merit a branch office.

Our staff, Catherine Jackson and Cub Coneybeare, will be at our Haliburton location to maintain their relationships with you, and service your travel needs. For the next month your calls into Minden will be automatically transferred to Haliburton. We will be pleased to make ticket delivery to you, and give you the same personal commitment to excellence that we have in the past.

The agency in Haliburton is well established, and I believe you will find no inconvenience in this decision. We still offer the best prices, service you through our automated computer service, and most of all offer the INTRAGuarantee.

It has been our pleasure in the past year to be of service to you, and we sincerely hope you will still choose INTRATown and Country Travel when making your next travel arrangements. "INTRA TRAVEL" — One Step Ahead.

Sincerely,

Anne Lacarde

Reflections

Focus on GNP tears at social services

providing severely handicapped people with some excitement and fun. The value to the community of this kind of volunteer work is beyond price yet does not contribute to the GNP.

The pre-eminence of the economy and GNP tears at these hidden social services in developing countries and impels them to pursue cash to service international debt and products of industrial countries.

The role of the GNP in disrupting the social and environmental underpinnings of industrialized nations is illustrated in a story in Adbusters (Vol. 1, 3):

"Joe and Mary own a small farm. They are self-reliant, growing as much of their food as possible and providing for most of their own needs. Their two children chip in and the family has a rich home life. Their family contributes to the health of their community and the nation . . . but they are not good for the nation's business because they consume so little.

"Joe and Mary can't make ends meet, so Joe finds a job in the city. He borrows $13,000 to buy a Toyota and drives 50 miles to work every day. The $13,000 and his yearly gas bill are added to the nation's gross national product.

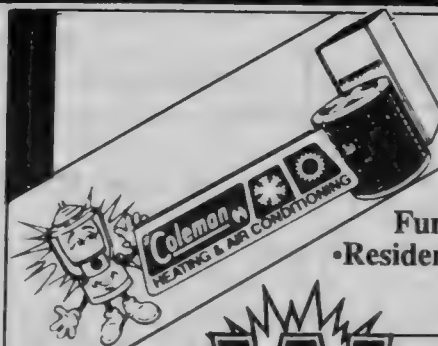

"Then Mary divorces Joe because she can't handle his bad city moods anymore. The $11,000 lawyer's fee for dividing up the farm and assets is added to the nation's GNP. The people who buy the farm develop it into townhouses at $200,000 a pop. This results in a spectacular jump in the GNP.

"A year later, Joe and Mary accidentally meet in a pub and decide to give it another go. They give up their city apartments, sell one of their cars and renovate a barn in the back of Mary's father's farm. They live frugally, watch their pennies and grow together as a family again. Guess what? The nation's GNP registers a fall and the economists tell us we are worse off."

You don't have to be an economist to know something's wrong and has to be changed.

CARD OF THANKS

I would like to thank the nursing staff on the 5th floor Civic Hospital, also the nursing staff of 2nd floor of St. Joseph's, and especially Dr. Peter Ho, for the excellent care they gave me. Also our children and spouses who have always been there for us. Thanks to our many close friends and family who phoned, sent cards and flowers, fruit baskets and their very special prayers and very special thanks to my hunting buddies who shared their good luck. Gratefully thanking everyone & God Bless.

Nelson & Hazel Austen

Thanks to the Roads Dept. for the great service that these men provided, especially during the storm of Nov. 11. It was very much appreciated.

Don & Ellen Holden

We would like to take this opportunity to thank the Fireman and his wife for opening up their home and helping at the scene of our accident on Highway 118 on November 5, 1990. Also we would like to thank Derek and Debbie Rowden for their patience and kindness, to family and friends for help after, to OPP Mark Lund. If we have missed anyone we are sorry but very grateful for their help.

Valorie & Tina Gilbert

IN MEMORIAM

SHAW - In loving memory of our two dear brothers Charlie, who passed away November 19, 1987 and Bob who passed away January 22, 1988.

There's a sad but sweet remembrance
There's a memory fond and true.
And a token of affection,
And a heartache still for you.

Lovingly remembered by sisters Pearl & Shirley.

COXHEAD - In loving memory of my dear husband Ken who passed away November 20, 1987.

He is gone but not forgotten
And, as dawns another year,
In my lonely hours of thinking,
Thoughts of him are always near.
Days of sadness will come o'er me.
Many think the wound is healed,
But they little know the sorrow
That lies in the heart concealed.

Always remembered by Shirley.

ROBINSON, PHILLIP - In loving memory of our dear husband, father and grandfather who passed away November 18, 1986.

Gone now are your sparkling eyes of blue
Your kind endearing way who made everyone love you.
Gone is your hearty laugh that said you loved life,
We were so proud to be your children, grandchildren and wife.
Now we just wait for the day of Christ's return,
When we'll be reunited with the loved ones for whom we yearn.

Forever loved by wife Florence, daughter Janice, son Bradley, son-in-law Jack, grandson Doug and granddaughter Karen.
